Watergate Hearings

At the Senate Watergate hearings a year ago, Magruder testified about the planning of Watergate operation and about the attempt to cut off suspicion of involvement at the level of the seven Watergate burglars.

Judge Sirica ordered him to surrender June 4 and recommended that he be sent to a federal minimum-security prison at Allenwood, Pa.

Magruder, 39, was a special saistant to President Nixon for 1 1/2 years, then left the White House in May, 1971, to become deputy director of the President's re-election campaign.

Magruder was the second former Nixon aide to be given a jail sentence in the last week. On May 15. Dwight Chapin, a former White House appointments secretary, was sentenced to 10 to 30 months for lying to a Watergate grand jury.

Six other former White House aides have been convicted since the Watergate burglary in June, 1972. They are Gordon Liddy, Egil Krogh jr., Frederick LaRue, John Dean 3d, Roward Hunt jr. and Herbert Porter.

Israelis Bomb 'Terrorist' Targets

TEL AVIV, May 21 (UPI).-Israeli bombers twice raided what were described as "terrorist targets" in southern Lebanon today following Premier Golda Meir's vow to hit the Arab guerrillas wherever they are. Fighting flared again with Syria.

A communiqué issued by the ministry said that land forces of both sides exchanged artillery fire for 30 minutes when an Israeli patrol attempted to take up positions on the Lebanese side of Mount Hermon.

More Golan Fighting At the same time Israeli troops on the Golan Heights front were fighting their 71st successive day of artillery duels with the Syrians, the Israeli command said, and one officer was killed. In Damascus, a Syrian communique said that Syrian and Israeli forces exchanged artillery and armor fire on Mount Hermon and that intermittent artillery fire spread to other sectors of the front. The air strike in Lebanon came a day after Mrs. Meir said that Israel would try to deal a fatal blow to the guerrillas following their raid at Maalot, where 30 persons, mostly children, died last Wednesday

U.K. Study Absolves the Pill Of Most Grave Side Effects

The biggest inquiry into risks from the birth-control pill acquitted it today of most of the serious side-effect charges laid against it. In fact, it said. "it could well be that the beneficial [side] effects actually exceed the adverse reactions."

The study was conducted by Britain's Royal College of General Practitioners. It began in 1968, will continue for at least two years more and so far has involved examination of 46,000 case histories submitted by family

On the debit side, the report confirmed that there are distinct, though very small, increased health risks for pill takers.

The pill is associated with increased incidence of urinary tract infections, skin problems and itching and with some more serious diseases, thrombosis of the leg, raised blood pressure and

On the credit side, the pill was found to improve such conditions as iron deficiency anemia, menstrual disorders, premenstrual tension, noncancerous lumps in the breast and even minor ailments like acne and too much wax in

"Some of the most widely reported adverse reactions, notably migraine and headache. vaginal discharge, depression and loss of libido (sex drive) are thought largely to be due not to any pharmacological action of the pill but to biased overreporting by women anxious about its possable effects." the report said.

There was no evidence that the pill was associated with cancer of any kind although longer-term

"It seems." the report said, "that the estimated risk, at the present time, of using the pill is one that a properly informed woman should be happy to take. "Not a single previously unsuspected important adverse elfect of the pill has been revealed by the study so far, and several suspected risks have been shown be small, or nonexistent. The risk of serious illness is very

Piil users reported an average of six episodes of illness every three years while non-users reported five. But women on the pill tended to report their health problems more often, so the evidence suggested that they were no more prone to illness than non-users and may even suffer fewer illnesses. However, takers did seem to get more chicken pox, possibly because the pill lowers residual childhood immunity. Slightly increased rates of other virus infections were reported and were said to warrant further investigation of the pill's effect on the body's defense mechanisms. There were also unexplained excesses of brachial neuritis (pain from the nerves of the arm; and of sciatica among takers and extakers which needed looking into. the study said.

Increased incidence of hypertension (high blood pressure) among takers seemed to be a long-term effect-fewer than one in 100 women reported it in their first year on the pill, and the figures could rise to around 5 percent after five years.

The progestogen hormone content of the pill could be responsible for this. The figures did not justify taking women off the pill routinely every few years to give them a break from usage, the PARIS, May 21 (IHT) .- With Valery Giscard d'Estaing, 48, at its helm, France will have a younger, less formal and more international image.

He also talked for several minutes in English with President Nixon, who had telephoned from Florida with congratulations. "Why, he even walks like Jack," said Robert Shriver, the late President's nephew, who was here covering the election for the Boston Globe and Rolling Stone. Although normally aloof and reserved, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing has learned to smile and shake hands he has been doing a lot of both lately.

Sunday, as he walked into his Rue de la Bienfaisance headquarters in Paris, many people yelled "Valéry." He took off his cost when campaigning in rural sections of France. And if "power is an aphrodisiac," a quotation which has been attributed to Henry Kissinger, it has already worked for Mr. Giscard d'Estaing, who is being called "sexy" in some Prench circles.

Nixon Offers to Compromise On National Health Insurance

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla., May .21 (NYT).-President Nixon yesterday offered to compromise on a national health insurance program in order to enhance prospects for passage of national health legislation this year.

The President made his offer in a radio address yesterday afternoon, a day before the Senate Finance Committee was scheduled to open hearings on national health insurance legislation.

Farlier this spring, other administration officials, including the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Caspar Welnberger, had indicated that an eifort would be made to find accommodation between Mr. Nixon's Comprehensive Health Insurance Plan and health programs intro-duced by members of Congress.

Mr. Nixon enunciated these "basic principles" that, he said, must be included in any national health program:

• Patients must be free to choose their own physicians. The program must be built on the existing private system of health care rather than tear down that system.

• It must give all parties-consumers, providers and carriers of health services as well as state governments—"a direct stake in making the system work."

Merit Is Seen

Mr. Nixon asserted that the administration - proposed program was the only program to meet all these criteria. But he added that other proposed bills, including the health insurance plan introduced by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., together with Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., and the plan offered by Senators Russell Long, D-La., and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., also had merit.

"We are not ruling out compromise where compromise does not violate the basic principles of our proposels," Mr. Nixon said.
The Kennedy-Mills bill, while offering most of the benefits that are in the administration-proposed plan, would have the health program paid for by a Social Security tax and run by the federal government with some services provided by private insurers.

Mr. Nixon's program, in con-trast, would be funded by employer and employee taxes and would be entirely run by private insurers, following federal standards and supervised by state

Iran Warns Hanoi It May Quit Vietnam Peace-Keeping Unit

Iranian delegation has told the first time in two weeks, the Hanoi that it is not cooperating with the International Commission of Control and Supervision and has threatened to withdraw if the "uncooperative attitude" continues, officials said today.

Iran is the second member of the commission to threaten in the last week to pull out. Indonesia threatened to withdraw unless the Viet Cong and the Saigon government made it easier for the commission to carry out its duties. But yesterday, Indonesia announced that it will not leave as long as its presence is desired by the conflicting parties.

Iran joined the commission last September, It replaced Canada, which withdrew last July because of continued fighting, aix months after the Jan. 1, 1973, cease-fire went into effect.

The Iranian action comes at a time when fighting has intensified across South Vietnam and the peace-keeping machinery established by the Paris agreement has been torn apart by deadlocks and disputes.

Anti-War Groups Focus on Halting U.S. Aid for Indochina

WASHINGTON May 21 .- On Oct. 21, 1967, Larry Levin and 100.000 other demonstrators marched through lines of soldiers and federal marshals to the walls of the Pentagon in a protest against the Vietnam war. Today Mr. Levin is still trying to end the war, but his tactics have

"We see now how the war is happening," he said, "and how it has to be stopped—through the United States Congress."

In contrast to their demonstrations, marches and skirmishes with police and National Guard men in the 1960s, the peace movement today is quiet, less visible, but still very much alive. "People who think the peace movement is dead," Mr. Levin said, "have been looking in the old

"And when all that failed because of resistance throughout Indochina and opposition in the United States, the government was forced to continue surreptitiously by funding repression."

The recent defeat in Congress of the administration's request for additional military aid to Saigon was, according to Mr. Levin, largely a result of efforts by the peace forces which, in the last year, have developed a unified congressional strategy.

When the request for aid was made known, the coalition began organizing its campaign. Concentrating on 30 senators and 76 rep-

Mr. Levin was optimistic about future successes. There is in-creasing resistance in Congress to the Nguyen Van Thieu government, even among moderates.

Defeat of the administration request, according to Mr. Levin, shows that the peace movement has not lost strength. "Large demonstrations aren't happening much anymore." he said "But there is a lot of activity on a different level"

Educational campaigns simed at action, particularly action directed at Congress, have been a major part of efforts by peace groups, based on slide shows, films, leaflets and newsletters.

Fred Branfman, director of the Indochina Resource Center, has also been focusing on Congress. Testifying last week before the House Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs, Mr. Braniman accused the Nixon administration of subverting the public and congressional mandate for peace. All Hostages Win Freedom From Gunmen in Three Citi

GOTEBORG, Sweden, May 21 (Reuters).—A young gunman surrendered to police today after his doctor talked him into coming out of the pharmacy where he was holding five women as hos-

The gunman, in his early 20s. was identified by one of the hostages, who threw a piece of paper with his name on it through an open window. Police were then able to contact a doctor who had been giving the man psychiatric

The doctor and a policeman reasoned with the gunman, a former convict, for an hour before he was finally coaxed into giving up his submechine gun and releasing the five women. He was taken to a hospital for treatment. Sought Release of 2

His demands were for the release of two Swedish criminals. Jan-Erik Olsson and Clark Olofsson, who are serving jail sentences for holding four hostages for nearly six days in a Stockholm bank last August. The gunman also demanded that a German drug smuggler, Karl Pauksch, who is serving an eight-year sentence, be freed. It was the third case of its kind in less than a year in Sweden.

In addition to last August's bank incident, there was the case two months ago of a gunman holding a woman prisoner at the Belgian Embassy overnight before surrendering.

24 Freed in Seoul SEOUL, May 21 (AP) .- Three gunmen were caught napping by one of 34 hostages held in a Seoul tearoom and were arrested today by policemen and soldiers summoned by the hostage.

The hostage, an employee of the tearoom, telephoned police when the men fell asleep after holding their captives at gunpoint for 20 hours.

The ordeal began when the three allegedly stole an automobile, killed a police officer during a chase through Seoul and commandeered a bus to the Myong-Dong, one of Seoul's busiest business districts, where they entered the tearoom.

Business is brisk in Fort Pedro an it seems to be at others among South Carolina's 3,000 retail fireworks outlets, the most in the nation: The Fourth of July is one reason for the good business. Forthcoming Sales Ban

But this year, there is an added reason. Within a short time most likely by the time the Fourth rolls around, all firecrack-ers will be banned from sale to the general public by decree of the Federal Consumer Product Safety Commission. Only "Class C" fireworks—those sold to the public-will be affected. The sanctioned displays but on across the country to celebrate the Fourth will not be.

All of this bodes ill for the South Carolina fireworks industry, probably the largest of its kind in the country, because South Carolina is the only state on the Atlantic Seaboard that allows year-round fireworks sales. Just how badly sales will be hurt is unknown, but it is esti-mated that about 40 percent of fireworks now being sold will be banned under the new regulation. Annual sales of all Class C fireworks are estimated at up to

The publishing of Public Land Order 5418 last month marked the end of 66 years of homesteading here, and it was unexpected by most Alaskans. The order reserved the remaining 15 million acres of open-to-entry lands for possible use as national parks or other land-management projects.

According to the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, Alaska was the last state to offer land for homesteading. Under the Homestead Act of 1862, a prospective land owner could stake out up to 160 acres of public land designated for homesteading.

First Settler in 1908

At least 20 acres of the land had to be farmed, and homesteaders were required to live on their tract for at least seven months a year for three years before receiving a government patent certifying their ownership.

Introducing the Airbus. Extravagant on comfort. Stingy on fuel.

The Airbus is a remarkable aircraft combining two advantages never before present on short flights: maximum comfort and large capacity.

The Airbus gives you lots of legroom, more than you've ever had on short flights. It has great big doors, spacious entryways, two wide aisles. And because there's twice the cabin baggage space, you can carry aboard larger bags than ever before.

Even a large suitcase of 45 by 37 cm is permitted, and it stores conveniently in an enclosed space over your seat. Throughout the Airbus, seating is arranged so that you're never more than one seat away from an aisle. You can even choose to sit in a no-smoking section if you wish. In fact, every detail down to the lighting and air conditioning has been conceived with your comfort and convenience in mind.

One of the Airbus' greatest advances is its engines. They're the quietest jet engines ever developed. And moreover, they use a lot less fuel than previous jets. With the Airbus' large capacity, there's a tremendous saving on fuel per passenger.

So when you fly the Airbus, go ahead and enjoy its extravagance on comfort. It's justified by its stinginess on fuel

Loyal to What?

A crackle of gunfire in half-deserted Belfast added an ominous note to a political strike that has already crippled Northern Ireland. The shooting, to be sure, was a very minor episode by comparison with the bombings in Dublin, in the Irish Republic, a wanton slaughter that is generally assumed to be related to the increased militancy in Northern Ireland. But bombings, however atrocious, can be ascribed to the lunatic fringe that seems to spread, nowadays, from the edges of every political movement. The guns of Belfast seemed an inevitable concomitant of the strike and the emotions that had given rise to it-and the question they Taised was how many more would join in.

The Ulster strikers and the armed groups around them have been variously described as Protestants and loyalists. Since the actions of the "hard-liners" of Northern Ireland are about as far removed from any religious concept as, say, those of the Irish Republican Army on the other side, it would seem that "loyalist" would be the more appropriate adjective, but that poses the immediate problem: loyal to what? Not to the British government, certainly, since the strike and the accompanying violence is directed against an initiative taken by that government to restore peace to a muchtroubled land. Loyal to Ulster? But it is Ulster that is being harmed by the strike: It is the people of Ulster who are being starved out and harassed for no conceivable practical or beneficial goal.

The only loyalty that can be found in the militant loyalists of Northern Ireland is to a way of life that was founded on two precepts: predominance of a Protestant majority on the spot, and a refusal to recognize that Ireland is an island-not a very large one, at that. The changes against which the strikers, gunmen and bombers are protesting are very moderate: granting an official voice to the Catholic minority in Ulster, and the formation of a Council of Ireland which could discuss, and presumably act upon. problems common to North and South.

This was not acceptable to the IRA committed to a united Ireland, or to the extremists of the North, equally determined to see Ireland permanently divided. Both, for all their use of modern means of killing, for all their defiance of authority, are prisonersjailed within walls that a long and tragic history has erected. To them, those walls are a fortress against the invasion of rational ideas that threaten an artificial selfesteem, and induced xenophobia. But they are prisons nonetheless, in which the militants would confine an entire people.

For Ireland, for Britain, this is an urgent dilemma, for which no easy or speedy solutions seem at hand. For the world at large it can only be another illustration of the difficulty of applying reason to the thornier aspects of the human condition and of curing the imbedded ills of historic errors and evils without the costly and often futile application of force and counterforce.

'Miracle' in Sight

A negotiated disengagement between Israel and Syria is not yet reality; but the decisions taken over the weekend give reassurance as to the good intentions of these longtime belligerents against all the provocations of extremist wreckers.

While details of the sensitive diplomacy that Secretary of State Kissinger is conducting have yet to be disclosed, it is apparent that the stumbling block was whether the new truce lines on the Golan Heights were to have promise of stability, or rather serve as a jumping-off point for future military

For negotiating purposes such abstractions have to be embodied in tactical realities, so the issue became the disposition of several. chscure hills around the occupied town of Kuneitra. Israel had already agreed to withdraw from this abandoned provincial capital, but if Israeli military positions were to be permitted at certain high points, they could threaten Syrian life in the town. Conversely. Syrian artillery on the hills could pose a threat to Israeli settlements on the other side. Israeli suspicions were heightened earlier in the negotiations by Syrian insistence on regaining certain positions—as if they intended to dig in for future harassment campaigns.

The breakthrough of last Saturday seems to have been Syrian President Assad's willingness to let key high points fall in a demilitarized buffer zone, thus reassuring both sides against the prospect of attack. Once this point became clear, Secretary Kissinger and his aides could not conceal their assumption that the other pieces of the accord would fall quickly into place. That is the process now under way.

Impressive under any circumstances, it is doubly significant that Syria and Israel are moving toward agreement under the shadow of last week's tragedies at Maalot and the Israeli reprisals against Palestinian camps in Lebanon. With passions on both sides running so high after these tragedies, it does credit to all parties that they decided not to lose the moment in a process of farreaching importance.

It seemed extravagant some weeks ago when Egyptian President Sadat openly forecast "miracles" from Secretary Kissinger's current mediation shuttle. At this point, and barring unforeseen setoack, that prophecy may not be too far off the mark.

Kleindienst Guilty

Former Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst's gullty plea in the ITT case suggests a dismally low standard of honor that President Nixon maintained for his administration. Mr. Kleindienst has admitted that he lied to the Senate Judiciary Committee during his confirmation hearings two years ago when he denied that the White House had ever interfered in his conduct of the IIT anti-trust case. In reality, President Nixon had personally ordered him to drop an appeal to the Supreme Court in behalf of the government.

The President knew at the time that Mr. Kleindienst had committed perjury concerning this episode. Yet, he did nothing to correct this deception of a Senate committee and swore Mr. Kleindienst into office as the nation's chief law enforcement officer.

As head of the executive branch of government, Mr. Nixon was within his rights in intervening in a major anti-trust suit if he wished to change the course of policy. But under any theory of free government, an executive has to be accountable to the elected representatives and to the people. Mr. Nixon was not only unwilling to account for his action but permitted his subordinate to conceal it when questioned under oath.

By pleading guilty to a misdemeanor, Mr. Kleindienst has bargained his way out of a possible perjury conviction that would have cost him a prison term and certain disbarment. As it is he is subject to no more than 30 days imprisonment, and even that penalty may be suspended. This is in marked contrast with the sentence of 10 months imposed on Dwight L. Chapin. former appointments secretary to President Nixon, for his perjury before a grand jury.

The difference is that Mr. Chapin pleaded innocent and went to trial, while Mr. Kleindienst is cooperating with the special prosecutor in providing information on the whole tangled story of the ITT settlement. However valuable Mr. Kleindienst's cooperation may be, the discrepancy between the two sentences once again tends to create an uneasy feeling about "even-handed justice." THE NEW YORK TIMES.

International Opinion

Giscard's Problems

Domestically France's immediate problem is spiraling inflation, rising at the annual rate of 16 percent. And Valery Giscard d'Estaing, the new President-who has been finance minister for nine years-may have to seek new solutions for past and existing economic problems. . . . In the field of international politics. France may perhaps break away from its immediate past because d'Estaing is no Gaullist. France has a significant role to play in a European Common Market, too, which is facing a distinctly uncertain political future.

Perhaps of far more importance are France's future relations with the United States-and its attempts at political dominance of Europe. On current indications, d'Estaingwith his moderately conservative policies-is expected to get politically closer to the United States than his predecessor. But in the final analysis the ultimate success of d'Estaing's domestic and foreign policies will depend on the answer to one crucial question: How long will be be able to preside over a domestically trouble-free France?

Even Bulgaria, which is the Soviet Union's staunchest ally in Enstern Europe, has been influenced by détente. A few years ago the very thought of organizing tourist excursions to America would have been almost treasonous here. Nowadays package tours to the West are possible for deserving regime supporters.

This is not to suggest that any political or cultural liberalization is under way. The Bulgarians continue to run as tight a ship ideologically as any in the Warsaw Pact. The Bulgarian leadership, which has been dominated by Communist party chief Todor Zhivkov since 1954, is trying to join the détente game on its own terms. Bulgarian officials have been telling American visitors that they are primarily interested in expanding commercial relations with the United States but that such cooperation would not be undertaken at Soviet expense

There is a good deal of talk here about possible big American investments in Bulgaria and figures bandled around are hundreds of millions of dollars (last year the total U.S.-Bulgarian trade was less than $20 million while in 1972 it was just over $3

In fact, several major American firms are said to have conducted exploratory talks with the Bulgarians. One American firm is studying the possibility of co-operation in the aluminum field, A major U.S. steel firm is said to be discussing a project involving the construction of a mammoth steel mill here (with annual pro-duction of 10 million tons).

The Americans are currently conducting a feasibility study on the steel project. As seen by the Bulgarians, the Americans would provide technology and capital investment, the Bulgarians would provide labor and some limited investments, while the iron ore for the projected mill would comefrom the Soviet Union, Bulgaria has no iron ore deposits for such DARIS.—As the French see it, Valéry Giscard d'Estaing won his office Sunday by a whisker, but actually it was a landslide when compared with the famous victory of John F. Kennedy Richard Nixon in 1960.

Kennedy was only 2 percent of the vote over Nixon (49.7 as against 49.5. with .6 percent going to Sen, Byrd) whereas Giscard gained the Elysée with a 1.4 percent edge over François Mitterrand. But in this French election there was a far heavier tint of right-versus-left ideology than in its U.S. prototype.

Yet the mere fact that the Fifth Republic had never seen so close an electoral race, encouraging comparisons with the Kennedy photo-finish, cannot displease its new chief of state. For, since the JFK political machine began its triumphant march in 1960 when Giscard was 34 (nine years younger than the late American President), he has deliberately chosen Kennedy as

You! Image

He continually stressed an interest in youth. He built his image on the idea of vigor and freshness. Tall, handsome, his life-style is a French version of Kennedy's: rich, socially prominent family, lovely wife, hand-some children, political ancestry.

One grandfather was a senator: a great-grandfather was a cabinet minister; both his own and his wife's forebears have been interested in public affairs. Her cousin, Prince Michel Ponia-to France and Austria and a king to Poland, is his closest political side. Ponlatowski heads the Giscard "Matia. Giscard was interested in America even before he became fascinated by Kennedy. He spent six months in 1951 traveling across the United States without a penny in his pocket, doing odd bs. But already, with a fine military record and a first-class education behind him, he was marked by boundless ambition. encouraged by his father, the wealthy boss of almost as many enterprises as the late Joseph P.

He might easily have become a snobbish intellectual but took pains to round out his personality and develop popular appeal: accordion playing, sports (mountaineering, skiing, swimming, village football, hunting, piloting his plane). And he encourage similar interests among his "Mafia," just as Kennedy had done. Thus Ponistowski is himself a swimming and skiing champion. By 30 Giscard was a deputy;

by 36 the youngest French fi-nance minister of this century; by 1962, the new President had founded his own party. De Gaulle, aware of Giscard's thrust toward power, said: "One day he will betray me. Let's hope he does

Now Giscard has at last attained the goal he set himself, the most youthful chief of the French state in almost four generations. What does he intend to do with the power won?

Obviously he hopes to unite a riven France momently split into right-wing and left-wing halves, becoming "President of all the French." But he intends to rule, not reign, not weakening the executive powers granted by the Fifth Republic's constitution to its president.

He has already made clear he will bring "new men" into the government and, like Kennedy, without losing time. Momentum is likely to be the theme in coming weeks.

Internally, he will obviously have a difficult time applying his determination to curb inflation and keep the franc strong while carrying out some of his campaign pledges to equalize existing social and wage burdens. His monetary views should help realfirm a strong friendship with West Germany, now also headed by an ex-finance minister, his friend Helmut Schmidt, with whom he will confer next month.

Europe Emphasis :

Giscard is unlikely to dramatically alter French nuclear policy or to change the odd-man-out NATO allegiance. His foreign policy emphasis will be on "Europe" where he hopes to see France play a positive yet more accepted role.

In this respect he opposes renegotiation of major terms cover-ing Britain's Common Market entry. He wants to see the United States a "partner" but in no sense a "participant" in the European organization. He would oppose consultation with Washington by the European Community, prior to reaching its own

It is improbable Giscard d'Es-thing will initially sacrifice con-tinuity to change in any fundamental sense. The France he seeks to mold will be more efficient and will give a more youthful and liberal impression. It is likely to produce a compromise formula-more leeway to Fourth Republic politicking under a streamlined Fifth Republic executive.

Canada Calls India's A-Blast a Violation

By. Robert Trumbull

ST. JOHN'S, Newtoundland, May 21 (NYT).—The Canadian government, which aided India's nuclear-energy program, regards the Indian nuclear blast of Saturday as a violation of a 1971 understanding between the two countries, an aide to Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau said

Ivan Head, who is the prime minister's chief foreign-policy adviser, said Mr. Trudeau and Prime Munister Indira Gandhi had agreed in January, 1971, on the conditions of Canadian aid.

"Mrs. Gandhi guaranteed peaceful use of nuclear energy. according to our definition, which did not extend to explosions," Mr. Head declared.

He said Mr. Trudeau had made it clear to Mrs. Gandhi that Canada would regard any nuclear explosion" as a "nonpeaceful act."

The advisor said Mr. Trudeau had ordered Canada's high commissioner—or ambassacior—m New Delhi, Bruce Williams, to "demand all information" on how India obtained the materials for the explosion of a nuclear device and for all details on the blast itself. Aboard Jet

That Food Dictionary, a Mislaid Year and Logorrhea

By Waverley Root

DARIS (IHT).-It may have come to the attention of diligent readers of the International Herald Tribune that I have been contributing to it, off and on, articles on food, usually, but not exclusively, on its enible aspects. Come to think of it, no great amount of diligence has been required. The hard thing would have been to miss them (though I understand that some readers try), for these pieces have been running, if my records are correct, since June 1971. They have been identified as adapted from a book ("Food: An Informal Dictionary") to be published by Simon and Schuster, and since they first began appearing in this newspaper I have received hundreds of letters from persons who want to know when the book is coming out (some of them, God bless them, had even been to bookstores to ask for it). It is a good question,

At nove readers may have noted that the explanatory note originally restricted to a book "to be published soon by Simon and Schuster." The word "soon" was quietly scuttled quite a while ago, with the relieved consent of everybody concerned, including Simon and Schuster, the most patient of publishers, who are nevertheless, at a guess, the ones who would most like to have an answer to this

It was put once more a little while ago by a reader who phrased it so succincily and pointedly that perhaps, by answering him in public, I can respond simultaneously to all other questioners, past and future. "I suggest that many would welcome more information on Mr. Root's forthcoming book," he wrote. "Exactly when it will be published, how many pages, what is the cost . . . and other details would be appreciated." Well, I can take care of all those queries with a single answer: "I don't know."

If this letter had reached me in 1971, I could have answered precisely. (1) The book will be published in the fall of 1973. (2) It will be 150,000 words long—say 500 pages. (3) It will cost $10. This must have been true. It was in the contract.

But man proposes and logorrhea disposes. What are the answers now? (1) Something happened to the fall of 1973; it got mislaid and I can't find it anywhere. As things stand now the book may get out, with luck, at the end of 1975; but 1976 seems likelier. (2) Of the required 150,000 words, I have now written 335,000 and I am less than halfway through; my guess is that I will wind up with somewhere from 700,000 to 800,000 words, enough, if by some improbable chance all of them get printed, to fill two fat encyclomore; book paper has gone up 30 percent since the beginning of this

What happened? The subject took the bit in its teeth and ran away with it, that's what happened. I know now how Sir James Frazer felt when, after setting out to dash off a brief monograph on a single obscure rite, he found himself in the embarrassing possession of the 12 volumes of "The Golden Bough." When you start to dig into the details of any subject, however peripheral, you had better look out or you will find yourself trying to write about everything,

A concrete example: A few days ago I was dealing with that important food fish, the cod. In the middle of a sentence I opened unsuspectingly what was intended to be no more than a parenthetical aside and before I could close it again I had to bone up on three centuries of Norman conquest (it was the Normans who converted Europe to preserved cod).

This happens all the time and one of the reasons why it happens is that everything has to be checked; you can't trust any of the authorities. I sometimes catch myself thinking that, on the subject of food, even the most revered reference books are always wrong. This is an overestimate, of course provoked by frustration: but I should think it safe to assert that 30 percent of the information on food contained in the reference books is actually misinformation. (My prize trophy to date is a sentence of six words which contains three errors). The situation is getting worse all the time, for everybody rewrites everybody else, everybody files everybody else, and once an error gets into the files it never gets out againespecially if they are computerized files. It takes a long while to accumulate enough background to be able to recognize those cases in which 50 repetitions of the same statement do not represent confirmation of it by 50 different independent sources, but only the echoing by 49 writers of a mistake made by the 50th.

The mail which I have been receiving from IHT readers since my food articles began running has often had the effect of expanding the job; readers with special knowledge in certain areas, or simply with questions, set me off fact-hunting in totally unexpected

It never occurred to me, for instance, that there was anything particularly mysterious about caraway. I have inhabited the same universe as caraway all my life, and I knew exactly what it was—or so I thought. Well, I didn't, and neither, I discovered, did anybody else. Having written in blissful innocence in an article on anise that "false auise is caraway; bastard anise is carvi." I received a letter from Mrs. Lois Hayna of Wheat Ridge, Colorado (the pedia-sized volumes. (3) How much will it cost? Too much Nobody IET gets around), asking what was the distinction between carain the book business dares to make guesses about future prices any way and carvi. "This I will answer in five minutes." I told myself, reaching for my copy of Louis Lagriffe's "Le Livre des Epices, des Condiments et des Aromates," which rarely lets me down. It did this time, though, and I spent four monts identifying caraway. a detective story so intricate that Harper's magazine published my account of it in August, 1972, while Mrs. Hayna's story appeared in The Herbartst, the journal of the Herb Society of America. The last word on caraway has perhaps not yet been uttered. Mrs. Hayna now growing in her herb garden, to see what comes up, seeds of various members of the caraway family from four countries on three continents, supplied to me by Monsleur Paris, who, at 8 Avenue du Maine, not only maintains an exotic food shop, but also knows everything about all its contents (he has informed me about foods as different as the Caribbean custard apple and the Chinese

Catrip Question

I am often surprised by the subjects which provoke letters from readers. I almost skipped catnip entirely, a marginal subject, it seemed to me. It certainly never occurred to me that anyone would write in about it. Somebody did, I had reported, on what seemed the best of authority, that cats do not swallow catnip; they chew it, for the juice, and spit out what is left. A cat owner in America. informed me that her cat eats the stuff (this could have been a unique case, of course; I once knew a cat that are phonograph needles, but I am sure no one would argue with me if I asserted that cats do not eat phonograph needles). The result of this query, to date at least, was the discovery that cats do sometimes swallow catnip, but cough it up again. Catnip, I am informed by a veterinarian, is a brush for the stomach. In the process of that constant attention to its toilet which is characteristic of cats, the animal licks off and swallows small hairs which irritate the stomach lining. They adhere to swallowed catnin and are regurgitated along with it. I have checked this phenomenon by experiment, but I would advise you not to follow this example if you have wall-to-wall carpeting, as I have—or had.

An incidental result of this research was the discovery that if Paris cut owners buy catnin in the herb shops along the Seine, they will be taken for a ride. France grows both of the two main kinds of catnip, but what they palm off on you (or on me, anyway) as herbe our chats in Paris is not herbe our chats at all, but chiendent (couch-grass) and cats turn up their noses at it. Another incidental discovery was that the same species of catnip affects cats differently, depending on whether it is grown in France or America; American catnip packs more punch. The last word has not been said on catnip either. Believe it or not, at this mome have at my service a French cat named Chiffonette whic champing away on American catnip and an American cat m Woodruff which is working out on French catnip. I sincerely it occurs to no reader to challenge my statement that lions

Chewing gum was another subject on which I assumed int would be less than passionate. It almost got left out too. gum, one of them from Mexico (the IET does get around). If also provoked letters from the Philippines (about the Ots apple), from the Seychelles (about the sea coconut) and from Sahara Desert (about the camel).

My card file is the heart of Operation Food, and is another n why the dictionary is not likely to appear before-did I say Let's make it 1977. I find that its cards, housed in nine boxes, contain approximately 75,000 items of information. Tr a considerable asset, from the point of view of storing facts liability from the point of view of saving time. Each time I t a new subject I have to find out what information concerns is tucked away in those nine filing boxes, plus whatever else exist in an auxiliary series of six others, plus what may be tained in my three large four-drawer filing cabinets, plus wh printed in the 23 general reference books which I consult fo entries (including such impressive works as the 24-volume I clopaedia Britannica and the 10-volume Grand Larousse Encyc dique), plus what may have been confided to any pertinent vol dealing with the specific subject under consideration amone 200 miscellaneous food books in my collection. Just to make fun more furious, this store of information is growing all the The longest entry in my food dictionary so far is APPLE—words; but since it was written, 90 additional items of inform have instructed themselves into my card file and will have taken into consideration before the final version is ready for press in—did I say 1977? Make it 1978.

One last example of the frustration furnished by facts last!" I told myself, as I started my labors with AARON'S (an edible mullen). "An alphabetical list which does not with AARDVARK!" Well, as I said above. "Man disposes The sardvark I discover is eaten in Africa; and I have not able to discover any other foodstuff whose spelling will permi to evade the incluctable.

The last entry, it appears now, will be ZUCCHINI. Pice: not bring up ZUPPA ALLA GRECA or ZWIEBACK. These di come under the head of FOOD, which deals only with raw mate but of DISHES, my next encyclopedia but one (after DRI 1985, shall we say?

Schilling May Be Revalued, Aide Reports

VIENNA, May 21 (Reuters).-The Austrian schilling may be allowed to float higher in another de facto revaluation like the action the government took last week, Finance Minister Hannes Androsch said today.

In its move last week the government severed the informal tie of the schilling to the joint European float, effectively revaluing the currency by about 3 percent.

The National Bank said the schilling would be allowed to vary as much as 9 percent—double the previous amount - against the other six currencies involved in the joint European float.

Bank officials said the action was taken to combat inflation.

Target on Inflation In an interview today, the finance minister said the target is to bring inflation down to percent next year. Last month inflation had pushed prices 9.7

Mr. Androsch said the government's stability program is the most important issue and action on the schilling will be taken if the situation calls for it.

Asked what action Austria would take if West Germany formally revalues the mark, Mr. Androsch said the government would have to reconsider the situation, again stressing the need to maintain stability.

The goal at the moment is to maintain Austria's adjusted links with the European joint float, in which the mark is the most important currency owing to the size

Swiss Close Capital Marts To Aliens

Domestic Borrowings Not Well Received

ZURICH, May 21 (Reuters).— Swiss capital exports in the form of foreign loan and medium-term note issues have been stopped for the time being, a National Bank spokesman said today.

The halt was decided upon after the two Swiss federal loans met with mixed results from in-The National Bank said the 250-million-franc, 7 1/2 percent, 10-year federal loan was slightly versubscribed, while the 200-million-franc, 7 percent, seven-year loan was heavily undersubscribed. The government subsequently decided to increase the amount of the 7 1/2 percent loan to 260 million francs, while the amount of the 7 percent loan was reduc-ed to 190 million francs. The National Bank said it will take part of the non-subscribed federal loan bonds into its own portfolio, and will also provide support for the bourse quotations of the two new federal loans by intervention purchases. The purpose of these measures is to prevent as far as possible a sudden rise of interest rates and to contribute to an urgently needed calming of the capital market, The decision to halt capital exports in the form of foreign loan and note issues was taken in this connection. Foreign bond issues have always been highly popular on the Swiss market because they are tax-free and usually offer higher returns than domestic loans. The bank gave no indica-

Wheat Crop In U.S. Soars

By H. J. Maidenberg

NEW YORK, May 21 (NYT).-The United States is about to harvest a "fantastic" record winter wheat crop that is expected to be only 6 percent below the combined winter, spring and du-rum grain output of 1973, the goveroment reported yesterday in its wheat situation bulletin.

The report contributed to a broad sell-off of almost all commodities yesterday. Other factors that slashed prices for foodstuffs, minerals and fibers included the rise in interest rates, which makes the carrying of raw materials in-

Normally, winter wheat ac-counts for two-thirds of the nation's total harvest of the bread grain. But this year, the harvest, now under way in Texas and which will reach into Kansas in two weeks, has been put at 1.6 billion bushels of 60 pounds each.

That would be 27 percent above the 1973 winter wheat harvest, and would compare with total output of 1.7 billion bushels last season. The U.S. winter wheat crop is completed by July 4, and the spring grains are planted in May and June for harvest in the

The increase resulted from an 18 percent expansion of land given over to winter wheat last autumn higher per-acre yields. Some 51 million acres are expected to produce $5.2 bushels per acre, compared with 33.1 last year and the record 35.4 set in 1971.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Fisons Looks Beyond U.K.

Pisons, the U.K. pharmaceutical and chemicals firm, says the majority of its new investments will be made outside Britain. Chairman G.V. Burton says that one reason for concentrating spending overseas is because the climate for manufacturing investment is more favorable overseas than in this country." Current British policies are not geared to encourage investment by private industry, which is faced with "con-tinuously and rapidly escalating costs" that cannot be recovered adequately, he says. How-ever, profits in the first four months "both at home and abroad were most encouraging." But shortages of raw materials for the chemicals industry is making the situation "more difficult." Although profit growth within Britian "won't be as much as we expected," this should be more than made up for by sharper growth overseas,

Fiat, Saviem, Alfa Romeo Set Link

Fiat, Alfa Romeo and Sté Saviem have agreed to jointly produce high-speed, medium-cylinder diesel engines in southern Italy. Investment by a new joint company, to be one third-owned by each concern, is expected to exceed 100 billion lire ($157 million). Alfa Romeo is a subsidiary of the IRI state holding company. Saviem is the truck subsidiary of France's Renault. The new company, to be called Societa Franco-Italian di Motori (SFIM), expects to sell 55 percent of its output to Fist and Alfa Romeo, with the rest being exported, mainly to Saviem. The need for accelerated production of this type of motor is based in large part on the energy situation, which has turned attention to diesel motors. Fiat says. The only major makers of this type of motor currently are Mercedes, Peugeot and Perkins. The engines will be of three to six cylinders, producing between 40 and 100 horsepower each. Capacity of the planned plant was put at 1,000 units daily.

Con Ed Omits Dividend Forecast

More than 4,000 shar-holders attending a tumultuous annual meeting Monday of Con-Edison were told by president Charles Luce that no prediction could be made on when the 45cent-a-share dividend would be resumed. question of future dividends... will depend primarily upon the level of future earnings and upon the solution of the cost shortage which threatened our entire construction program. Certain-Teed Sees Little Growth Certain-Teed Products may not allow any earnings increase this year if its real estate difficulties are not resolved quickly enough, says Richard Beidl, director of corporate communications. The company is currently disengaging itself from this sector, following losses last year and a first-quarter deficit on the property investment side of over $1 million. Without the real estate losses, Certain-Teed's first-quarter net would have risen to more than $5.7 million instead of staying more or less static at $4.4 million. Certain-Teed, 30 percent of whose stock is named by St.-Gobain-Pont-à-Monsson of Prance 14 percent by Turner & Newall of Britain, and 6 to 8 percent by U.K. institutions, turned in a net income last year of $25.2 million.

U.S. Revamps Economic Data Reporting

WASHINGTON, May 21 (AP-DJ). - Concerned that their business barometers are giving misleading signals of the nation's economic health, administration economists are trying to make their statistics more accurate and useful. They hope the rereadings will better pinnotnt the causes of economic trouble

Among other things, the economists are upgrading the calculation and analysis of retail prices and spendable income and expanding surveys of salaries. The economists are also revising measures of how much U.S. businessmen sell and to whom. how much they spend for new factories and machinery, and how loud their plants are hum-Innocent though these changes sound, some see dangers in them. Labor-union chiefs are boiling at plans to revise the consumer price index, which is used to help determine the size of wage demands and cost-of-living pay raises for millions of workers. Because a broadened survey would include prices paid by many Americans besides the urban wage-earners now focused on, labor leaders fear it will understate living-cost increases for union members,

Inflation Ignored

Economists say government statistics may be prompting wrong economic decisions by the administration, Congress and industry if the readings are taken at face value. The main reason is simply that the indicators are not adjusted to allow for today's raging inflation

Thus the government's 12 leading economic indicators, which often foreshadow broad movements in the economy, have zip-ped shead at a 7 percent annual pace since last December, suggesting that the nation is in the midst of a business boom. But if price increases were screened out, these indicators actually would signal a sharp economic slow-

Prof. Fox reports he found "no evidence that any U.S. agency did an adequate job of forecasting economic developments during 1972-73." Indeed, he says be could not find one agency that had an adequate model of the world economy. White House economic advisers

Increase in Production Costs Less in U.S. Than Elsewhere

-Labor costs for each unit of production in manufacturing rose far less in the United States last year than in other industrial countries, the Labor Department reported yesterday.

The better U.S. performance in the key area of "unit labor costs" was particularly marked if the devaluation of the dollar's exchange rate against most of the other main currencies is taken into account. But even before the devaluation adjustment, U.S. unit labor costs rose less than in any other major country.

The reason was not an especially large increase in U.S. productivity, or output per manhour, last year. Instead, costs showed a relatively small rise entirely because wages rose far less than in all other countries except Canada.

Hourly compensation in manufacturing rose last year by 7.9 percent while productivity rose 4.7 percent. This resulted in an increase of 3.1 percent in unit labor

By contrast, hourly compensation increases in other countries ranged from 12.2 percent in Sweden up to 24.5 percent in Japan. Nevertheless, these countries had a better productivity performance than the United States—a rise of 18.3 percent in Japan and more than 6 percent in the others.

U.S. Inflation Declines As Cost of Food Drops

WASHINGTON, May 21 (AP). -Cheaper food slowed the in-crease in the U. S. cost of living in April to half the rate of increase registered in each of the previous three months, the government announced today.

The Labor Department said all prices rose six-tenths of 1 percent, leaving the cost of living 102 percent ahead of a year

The annual increase remained the biggest since the Korean war. The monthly figure compared to 1.1 percent in March, 1.2 percent in February and 1.1 percent in

The four-tenths of 1 percent drop in grocery store and restaurant prices combined was the largest in seven years. The decline in grocery store prices sione was seven-tenths of 1 percent, meaning a bag of groceries which cost $16 in March cost $15.89 in April Restaurant prices euged upwurd.

Other Costs Rise

But the drop in food prices was not enough to offset rises in prices of used cars, clothing, fuel and a broad range of other goods and services. Used cars done accounted for a quarter of the rise in nonfood commodities.

Herbert Stein, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said the new figures show a dampening of inflationary pressures caused by prices of food and fuel, which accounted for 60 percent of the recent consumer price increases. The April survey was taken during the week before Easter, well before manufacturers anneunced increases on some basic raw materials and manufactured goods including autos.

Another report released simultaneously with the consumer price index showed that inflation reduced workers' take-home pay by eight-tenths of 1 percent last menth, According to Labor Department figures, reduced working hours and higher prices have eroded by $11.20 the paycheck of a worker whose take-home pay was $200 a year ago,

The department attributed the decline to rising prices and a declining number of hours worked. Gasoline prices showed a 1.7 percent rise over the month, the slowest increase since imposition of the Arab oil embargo last October. The average price for a gallon of gasoline stood at 53.7 cents for regular and 57.3 for

Goods Orders Surge

Meanwhile the Commerce Department reported that new orders xous surged 3.6 percent in April, the biggest increase in six months, as bookings for autos rose sharply.

April bookings for durables ran at a seasonally-adjusted $43.69 billion, up from $42.16 billion in 0.7 percent.

The April increase was the sharpest since a 4.8 percent rise

March, when orders had declined last October. The department attributed the April advance to an $835-million increase in transportation equipment bookings and a $500-million rise in orders for primary metals. Order backlogs for durable goods increased 2.2 percent last menth to an adjusted $118.12 bulion. It was the biggest rise since a 2.3 percent climb last November.

Prices Drop On Wall St. In Dull Trade

NEW YORK, May 21 (IHT).-Prices drifted lower on the New York Stock Exchange today in dull, featureless trading.

News that the rise in consumer prices in April slowed failed to impress the market. "Inflation has been terrible and the government told us that in April it was just a little less terrible," one analyst commented.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 2.89 to 809.53. It was ahead about four points at its best level of the day. Volume totaled 12.19 million shares compared with 10.55 million yesterday.

Hercules, the most active issue on the Big Board, lost 1/4 at 40. USLIFE climbed 7/8 to 14 3/4 after the company said it expected 1974 operating results to improve more than in the first quarter, when net income rose 15 percent.

Gold mining shares were lower with bullion prices falling abroad. Dome Mines fell 2 7/8 to 155 1 8, ASA lost 1 3,4 to 75 3.4, Homestake was down 2 1/4 at 78 and Campbell Redlake fell 1 3/4 to Deere lost 1 1 at 35 after reporting lower April net.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer advanced 1 5/8 to 15 1/8. The company said directors approved a plan for new exchange offers to holders of its common and of its 5 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 1993. MGM said it is contemplated that it will offer about $3 cash plus about $23 principal on a new issue of 10 percent subordinated debentures in exchange for each share of MGM common accepted.

The American Stock Exchange index eased 0.40 to 80.76.

FINANCIAL REPORT FROM

Coll larch 14, 1974, Pennzoil's Board of Directors declared a dividend to Pennsoil common stockholders of record April 5, 1974, consisting of all the common stock of United Gas Pipe Line Company.

The purcose and effect of the common stock dividend is to sever the attilization which has existed between Pennzoil, an oil and gas producer, and Pipe Line. Pipe Line now has a new Board of Directors which is independent of Pennzoil, and the two companies have terminated joint management functions.

The past affiliation of the two companies has created substantial problems for both in their dealings with U.S. Federal and state regulatory agencies. The present regulatory cli-mate imposes restrictions on altiliated producers and pipelines which place them at a competitive disadvantage with comparable non-affiliated companies. Certain proposed legislation now being considered in the Congress would, if enacted, disallow Pennzoil and its producing subsidiaries and affiliates the same price for natural gas production as would be permitted to non-artificated producers. Such legislation would also prohibit bidding on Federal cilishore leases by Ponnzoil and its subsidiaries and affiliates solely because of their affiliation with Pipe Line. The disabiliation of Pennzoil and Pipe Line is intended to eliminate these problems and to improve the competitive position of both companies.

For the year ending December 31, 1973, Pennzoil Company reported net income available to common stock of $80,412,000 or $2.43 per share, representing a 35% increase over 1972.

It was a record year in both earnings and revenues for Pennzoil, Revenues that exceeded $1,000,000,000 for the first time reflected income growth in all major classes of the company a business.

Total Revenues	$610,240
Net Income	63,604
Earnings Per Share	1.93

Liquid hydrocarbon and natural gas production reached new highs, as old sales of sulphur, potash and molybdenum. Increasing prices accounted for a record year in copper revenues. Within the past five years, Pennzoit has invested more than $1,100,000,000 in these strategic materials. In the years ahead the company is confident of increasing benefit from these new ventures in products that are critical to an industrialized society.

After the divestment of Pipe Line operations, Pennzoil will concentrate its activities in the natural resource sphere of the economy. Over 95% of our reserves or oil, natural gas, copper, sulphur, molybdenum and potash are located on the North American continent.

The company's atfiliate, Pennzoil Ofishore Gas Operators, Inc. (POGO), began financial reporting in 1973 after initial production of oil and gas from three of its leases offshore Louisiana. Those results appear below:

Thyssen-Bornemisza made a record profit last year. Among other things.

Last year. Thyssen-Bornemisza made a record profit. The group continued its policy of rationalisation of existing assets and diversification into wider and more profitable markets, and for this reason the ratio of profits to turnover increased considerably. Furthermore in 1973 the return on capital employed was higher than ever before.

How have we done it?

By planning, growing and diversifying in each of our three divisions.

Industries

Last year we reorganised some of our enterprises into a newly formed Industries Division. It exceeded its planned performance substantially. For instance, we increased our production of natural gas in West Germany by 14%. We transported over 8,900 million cubic metres of natural gas through an associated company. NETG. And the planned extension to our Geldrop agricultural equipment plant should be finished later this year. Plans are already in hand to develop a new plant in Belgium, which will be in production in 1975. Last year the Industries Division contributed 59% of the group's

Trade and Transport

The Trade and Transport Division is expanding as well. We completed a major extension to our storage and transport facilities in Rotterdam and thanks to the increased demand for storage facilities for bulk goods and coal, the Trade and Transport Division increased its profits by 20%. And contributed 17% of the group's total profits.

Last year our Shipbuilding Division was responsible for constructing the largest tanker ever built in Western Europe, and now we've got orders for nine more of these ULCCs, as well as for four smaller ships. Last year the Shipbuilding Division of Thyssen-Bornemisza increased its sales by 18% And its profits by 29% And contributed over 22% of the group's total profits.

We have yards in Germany, Holland, and a giant new dock in Bremen-Vegesack, in which ships of up to 450,000 tons can either be built. er recaired.

Indian Head

Last year, the group acquired a 34% interest in Indian Head, the American industrial group, Indian Head employs 16,500 people in the USA Canada, and The Netherlands, and manufactures a wide range of products which can broadly be grouped under the following headings information Technology: Utilities & Communications products: Specialty Textiles, Metal & Automotive products, Glass Containers

We believe that Indian Head will make a major contribution to the group's profits in 1974, and that intelligent expansion into wider markets with growth potential (such as the USA) should continue to increase profitability in the years aboad. In line with this policy, further acquisitions to broaden the base of the Thyssen-Bornemisza Group are planned this year

ward's "All the President's Men" had to appear at the same time that President Nixon decided to publish a book of his own (which is now available in three paperback editions: "Submission of Recorded Presidential Conversations to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives by President Richard Nizon." United States Government Printing Office, $12.25; "The White House Transcripts," with an introduction by R.W. Apple jr. of The New York Times, Bantam. $2.50; and "The Presidential Transcripts," with commentary by the Staff of The Washington Post, Dell. $2.45). It's too bad, because it it had appeared after the Watergate scandal had run its course-a course whose future has only been made more dramatic by the appearance of the presidential transcripts — Bern-stein's and Woodward's "All the President's Men" would have been one hell of a book to read.

Without the distraction of the transcripts and their aftermath, one would have been able to concentrate on what the book really is—a story of journalistic enterprise recounting how the two young political reporters on The Washington Post dug behind what appeared at first to be a comicopera spying caper, unearthed what turned out to be a political scandal of unprecedented dimensions and won a Pulitzer Prize for their paper. One would have been able to immerse oneself in the story's rich drama-to feel one's pulse quicken as the two reporters pick up the scent of the trail from the moment they began to investigate James McCord jr.s CIA connections, one thing led logically to the next); to gulp apprehensively when they stumble in their pursuit (their worst moment occurred when they got their sources' signals crossed and reported H.R. Haldeman's putative guilt in the wrong context; and to cheer triumphantly when events finally force presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler to apologize for castigating The Washington Post (according to United Press International's report of the apology, "As Ziegler finished he started to say, 'But ... ' He was cut off by a reporter who said: 'Now don't take it back, Ron.' ").

One would have been able to savor the story's colorful details: how Bernstein and Woodward began their collaboration feeling skeptical and jealous of each other's skills, and only gradually synergy (their narrative presents them both in the third-person singular, thus creating a winning points who hears his partner open the bidding has four courses of action open to him: he can faint right away; he can suspect a psychic bid; he can bid a majestic seven no-trump, or he can look for a sensible way of con-firming his belief that a grand slam is there for the taking.

This was the problem that faced South on the diagramed deal, and he had not the slightest idea, what to do.

Some players would consider a slow approach, bidding one heart to find out more about North's hand before heading for slam. Some would launch directly into a Blackwood four notrump, so discovering that North has all the kings. North's second response, when South bids five no-trump, would probably be six clubs with a good partner. This should mean all four kings or none, in line with the response of five clubs to four no-trump, and partner should have no trouble in deciding which it is.
However, Blackwood would not soive the problem of the club queen, which is more important to South than any of the kings in the other suits. An immediate jump to five no-trump is tather better, asking North to bid seven clubs if he has two of the top three trump honors.

In response to this grand-slam force North would sign off in six clubs, and South would try six no-trump. - This would enable an intelligent North to bid the grand siam if he held, for example, " XXXXX in clubs, a holding good enough to withstand the absence of the queen. When there is surplus highcard strength, as here, slams are often safer in no-trump than in a suit. Here the bad club break

At Bloomington, Minn., Angel Mangual hit a triple and two singles, drove in a run and scored another to lead Oakland to a 5-4 victory over the Twins for its ninth victory in 12 games. The A's walloped three pitchers for 11 hits, including three triples and a double, and leithander Ken Holtzman, with relief help from Rollie Fingers and Darold Knowles, notched his fourth victory against five losses. The Twins' Rod Carew got three hits and raised his American Leagueleading batting average to .418. Expos 4, Pirates 2

At Montreal, Bob Bailey connected for his 200th career double to help the Expos defeat Pittsburgh, 4-2. Bailey's twobagger in the fifth inning drove home Willie Davis, who had singled with two out. Ken Singleton's single brought Bailey home to give the Expos a 4-0 lead.

LONDON, May 21 (IHT) .-- Argentina tomorrow plays at Wem-bley for the first time since its disgraceful World Cup quarterfinal of 1966. Farther North, in Edinburgh, the European Soccer Union (UEFA) meets to re-elect unopposed Artemio Franchi as its president. A significant and, perhaps, even a stormy day.

The situation at UEFA is particularly fraught. Revelations that UEFA conducted so perfunctory an inquest and then failed to take action over the Lobo Affair-the attempt by a Hungarian living in Milan to "buy" the Portuguese referee (Francisco Marques Lobo) of last year's Derby-Juventus European Cup tie, in favor of Juventushas caused grave anxiety among UEFA members. The West Germans and the English, in particular, are extremely perturbed. The Germans, indeed, are still leo Cap, already much criticized in his own country, will be anxious above all to avoid defeat on their way to the World Cup. Cap, it will be recalled, took over from the contentious Omar Sivori. He had to be recalled from Colombia to do so. Results have not been good. Cap has been criticized for leaning too heavily on too many undistinguished advisers. It is still not impossible, especially if things go wrong at Wembley, that he'll be replaced before the World Cup starts. His players seem dissident; they have even demanded heavy bonuses for "playing well," whatever that means, as opposed to winning!

England will hope that its new center-forward, Frank Worthington, the man who might have oualified England for the World Cup had Alf Ramsey had the sense and courage to pick him, will shine again. He made a remarkable, highly-distinguished debut at Wembley a week ago against Northern Ireland when he came on as substitute and transformed the game.

Our Story Up to Now

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON. — So President another decade or so might be Nixon will stay on. His decision will not be universally approved, of course. There will be the customary handwringing about "a constitutional crisis," which we have had repeatedly since the Watergate affatr first surfaced in 1973. but this will have little effect now upon a people fatigued with these constant cries of "constitutional headlines for a day or two. but these days it is very small chaff in the public diet. Since Nixon's decision to stay on at the White House, despite the 1976 elections, all subsequent constitutional crises have seemed merely tire-By announcing his latest stayon decision on the eve of the 1980 presidential nominating conventions, Nixon appears to be trying to avert the difficulties he experienced in 1976 when a successor was elected. We can only applaud his wisdom in doing to Surely the country will not wish to see repeated the disagreeable spectacle of January, 1977, when an elected successor arrived at the White House with two van loads of furniture only to discover that President Nixon's determination to stay on was stronger than anyone had anticipated. Nixon apparently hopes that by declaring his determination early not to be hounded out of office in 1980, the two parties may forgo the temptation to create a distressing scene at the White House gate on Jan. 20,

In his exclusive interview with Roland Braithwaite, Nixon makes a powerful case for his decision not to quit under fire. It would be wrong, he says, to quit when the vital foreign-policy initiatives he undertook in the early 1970s are still not fulfilled. He notes that Prof. Kissinger is now very close to negotiated withdrawal by Syrian and Israeli forces in the Golan Heights and that, if this succeeds, only required to stabilize the Middle Braithwaite reports, however, that the point on which the President was most forceful was his determination not to do anything harmful to the presidency.

The damage that would be done to that great institution would be incalculable, he said, if he were to step down simply because of pressure from hostile media, politicians, Congress, prosecutors and courts attempting to involve the judicial arm of government in matters reserved exclusively to the presidency under the Constitution.

Nixon was not dismayed by his low standing in the polls. To bow out because of an unhappy fluctuation in popularity polls, he told Braithwaite, would be a betrayal of the presidency-an offense of which he will never be guilty.

Perhaps the most disturbing thing about the Braithwaite interriew was Nixon's refusal to let Braithwaite see the presi-dency. When Braithwaite asked if he might have a look at it, Nixon momentarily lost his temper, declaring that the presidency was much too precious to permit its being poked and prodded by every journalist in Washington.

If he began by letting jour-nalists look at the presidency, he went on next congressmen would be asking to see it, and then prosecutors, and before long the country would be electing successors who would insist upon put-ling it on. If that were allowed, he said, the presidency would be severely damaged when the time comes for future presidents to assume it. In a rather more gentle tone, the President politely declined to tell Braithwaite where he keeps the presidency. To be sure, he assured Braithwaite that he never allows the presidency to miss a scheduled lubrication and oil change, but Nixon's reluctance to be more forthcoming about this great institution raises the most serious questions for all Americans. regardless of political coloration. When President Nixon finally completes his great task and decides that he can at last step down, could he possibly be planning to take the presidency with him?

Wrist-Wrestling in U.S.: A Way of Life for Some

By Tom Buckley
AS VEGAS, Nev. (NYT).—Arm-wrestling may strike most people as a harmless reaffirmation of masculinity for boys of all ages, usually carried on in the corner tavern after five or six boilermakers.

But for the 150 male and female contestants in the national championships, arm-wrestling-or wrist-wrestling, to give the contest its official name—is a way of life. "I've been working out five days a week for a year, getting ready for this," said George Ludwigsen of Brooklyn, N.Y., as he awaited the final of the heavyweight division last weekend. Warming up. he flexed huge biceps and rippled his massive pectorals beneath a T-shirt that bore the name of his Wrist-wrestling isn't as simple as it looks," he said, "Naturally, you've got to have the strength, but quickness from the moment of the referee's release means a lot. The most important thing, though, is to psych yourself up, to concentrate on winning, on seeing your opponent's hand hitting the table, and working out your strategy in advance, whether you're going to pull him out or push him down."

275 Pounds

Mr. Ludwigsen, a clerk at a brokerage house, said the pressure exerted by contestants in top matches might reach 275

"At least that's what I set my pulleys at when I work out,"

While the contest probably dates back to prehistoric times. wrist-wrestling has been conducted on an organized basis only for the past 20 years. It began in Petaluma, a town in northem California that is otherwise notable only for its appearance in the title of the song "When the Petals Fall in Petaluma," by Harry Partch.

Under tournament conditions, wrist-wrestling is conducted across a four-legged steel table 41 inches high and 24 inches equare. On the padded-vinyl surface are two fixed U-shaped cups in which the opponents place their right elbows—there is no competition for left-handers.

Although one male contestant said that the women's events were on the card "mostly for laughs." at least some of the women took them seriously. Jill Walker of Oceanport, N.J., burst into sobs after she was defeated in a grueling contest.

The Founder

The acknowledged founder of the sport and president of the governing association is Bill Soberanes, a columnist on The Petaluma Courier-Argus. Recently, however, and largely because of the telecasting of last year's championships, promoters who are attracted by the odor of honest sweat have been drawn to the sport.

In one of the televised matches, a contestant struggled so hard he broke his arm with a crack that was clearly heard in millions of living rooms. This sense of danger is probably what makes it attractive to promoters, although such incidents are said to be rare.

"This is the most exciting sport I've ever seen, and that includes the Olympics," said Steve Simons of Beverly Hills. 'I'm thinking of buying an interest in the association and taking this thing public. There are some interesting ramifications, from table sales to intercity team matches, like the Golden Gloves." Another man who thinks wrist-wrestling has commercial possibilities is Roger Jakubowski, the owner of boardwalk amusement concessions in Ocean City, N.J. "I came out here a couple of years ago with Mr. America." he said. "My man had the strongest right arm in the world but it didn't mean a thing when he went up against fellows who had the technique and had it in their whole mind to win." The Finals

About 500 persons were present for the finals, in which Mr. Ludwigsen was pitted against a former world champion, Jim Dosini of Petaluma. Mr. Dosini's surprise attack in the first few seconds of the match nearly pinned Mr. Ludwigsen's arm to the table. But Mr. Ludwigsen, his face crimson with exertion, twisted his left leg around the table and, inch by inch, forced his opponent back.

They strained ferociously for perhaps 10 seconds, and then Mr. Ludwigsen took the offensive. Down, down down went Mr. Dosini's arm, almost to the tabletop.

But Mr. Dosini rallied, too, and Mr. Ludwigsen was forced back slowly-and then, quickly. He held for a moment 2 few inches from the tabletop, his mouth pulled open in a grimace of pain, and then submitted to his opponent's pressure. Mr. Dosini let out a cry of victory as his supporters leaped onto the stage and embraced him. Mr. Ludwigsen stood for a moment shocked and white-faced and then put his head, cushioned, by his arms, face-down on the table.

The Case of the PEOPLE: Fireproof Suits

The New York fire department was John Moss, a 67-yearhas suspended sale of new uniforms for the city's 11,000 firemen in face of rank-and-file complaints that the new firefighting gear is highly flammable. After years without uniform specifications, firemen have been required since Jan 1 to wear dark blue polyester-and-cotton trousers and shirts, made to specs set by the department and firemen's unions. The new uniforms made them look like service station attendants, the firemen grumbled and besides there were reports that clothing had caught A Moline, Ill., woman w fire, melted and fused onto the that she was fired from flesh of several firemen. "We're at International Harves studying it: we're taking the complaints seriously." Robert Perez, Twenty years ago last week, the Rev. Oliver Brown of Topeka, Kansas, won the school segregation suit in U.S. Supreme Court that he had brought on behalf of his daughter, Linda, then 7. Brown died in 1961. His daughter is now the divorced mother of two children, a boy, 1I, and a girl, 9, who attend integrated schools in Topeka. They runacross it sometimes in books and libraries," Linda Brown said of the decision that opened a new era of race relations in the United States. "They do understand now that it was their mother and grandfather who did this." She is now a key-punch operator at Goodyear Tire & Rubber. Her mother is a bookkeeper in a bank. "I'm proud of my parents for what they did." ahe said.

sioner, told The New York Times.

The brother of Albert Desalvo, the self-professed Boston strangler, in the early 1960s, has applied for compensation from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts under a law providing relief to victims of violent crimes or to their families. Albert Desalvo was never tried in connection with the stranglings but was serving a life term for assaults on a number of Boston area women in 1964. Last November he was stabbed to death at Walpole State Prison, Richard Desalvo of Chelmsford, Albert's brother and administrator of his estate, has now filed a $10,000 claim—all the law will allow in district court. * * *
